

Dec—Jan

Oceanside Museum of Art

Coming exhibitions:
Trinh Mai: Lifeline
December 17-March 5

Trinh Mai is an interdisciplinary artist based in Orange County whose work is driven by innovative narratives of storytelling. Her work—charcoal, gouache, mixed media and stitching—re-imagines personal memories, family roots, and spiritual connections, altering conceptions of our identities and shared histories.

Dan McCleary, Etchings and Studies:
Taller de Grabado Oaxaca 2000-2016
December 17-April 9

Since 2000, Dan McCleary usually returns once, often twice a year, to the Taller de Grabado in Oaxaca, Mexico, to work with master printer Fernando Sandoval. There, McCleary and Sandoval work together to produce elegant and extraordinarily crafted etchings—more than 30 editions in the past 16 years—with imagery that includes sugar skulls, portraits of men and women, and flowers. This exhibition—which includes more than 25 of these collaborative prints made by pure line etching, aquatint, burnishing, and spit bite—will appeal to those who love the art of printmaking. However, the exhibition will also include hand-colored trial proofs, preliminary drawings, and many drawings and paintings

Alexia Markarian:
Desire is Never Enough
December 17- April 30

Markarian has been making artwork in a very wide range of media for more than 30 years. A restless experimenter and creator, she is known for using common materials in unexpected ways throughout her sculptural and design work—not to mention for presenting work that is psychologically charged.
