THE ARTS are ALIVE in OCEANSIDE!

Oceanside Museum of Art

Big Read Partnership

Artifacts: Allied Craftsmen Of San Diego
through July 8

Part of the Big Read partnership with Oceanside Public Library, this exhibition is connected to themes in the book Station Eleven that revolve around the “artifacts” of a recently collapsed early 21st-century Western society.

Members of the Allied Craftsmen of San Diego explore artistic interpretations of commonplace objects that give viewers the experience of artifacts from another time or place. Artwork will be in a wide variety of forms and materials, including ceramics, furniture, fabric, metals, glass, and the exciting intersections where a variety of media converge, creating a collection of curiosities that may inspire viewers to wonder about the strange and wonderful world these objects may have come from.

Survival is Insufficient through August 5

Part of the Big Read partnership with Oceanside Public Library, this exhibition addresses the essential role the arts play in our lives. An essential concept of Station Eleven is that survival requires more than basic needs, that there is value in art and creative expression that makes it intrinsic to life. The artists invited to take part in this exhibition—Joan Backes, Joe Brubaker and the Exquisite Gardeners, Larry and Debby Kline, Maily Morhous, Susan Osborn, Lori Pond, Marisol Rendon, and Cory Sewelson—use their artwork to visually express themes related to preserving culture in a dystopic landscape. These artists represent and utilize familiar objects, remnants of the built environment, and artifacts and icons of everyday life in an exploration of the cultural threads that tie us together.
